PREFACE

Fayetteville, the county seat of Cumberland County, due to its advantageous location and splendid climatic conditions, ranks high in the agricultural, industrial and commercial activities of North Carolina. It is located on the main line of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, 554 miles south of New York, on the famous Coastal Plain about 100 miles from the Atlantic Ocean. In addition to the main line of the Atlantic Coast Line, Fayetteville is served by the following railroads and their connections:

The Atlantic and Yadkin branch of the A. C. L. from Wilmington to Sanford, where it connects with the Southern Railroad for points in Western North Carolina.

The Bennettsville branch of the A. C. L. from Fayetteville to Bennettsville, S. C., traversing a wonderful agricultural section and connecting with the Seaboard Air Line at Maxton, N. C.

The Norfolk Southern Railroad from Fayetteville to Raleigh, affording connection with the Southern and the main line of the Seaboard.

The Aberdeen and Rockfish Railroad, from Fayetteville to Aberdeen, which opens up a wonderfully productive agricultural section, connecting with the main line of the S. A. L. and affording connections with the resorts of Pinehurst and Southern Pines.

In addition to the rail facilities, the net-work of public highways radiating from the city offers adequate facilities for overland transportation.

Fayetteville is also located on the Cape Fear River, 115 miles from the seaport of Wilmington, N. C., and at the present time the government has constructed two locks and dams in this river and is surveying for a third lock and dam so as to give the city all year water transportation, as the construction of this third lock will give a minimum depth of eight feet of water to Fayetteville the year round.

Fort Bragg, the largest permanent artillery post in the country, is located six miles from Fayetteville and is connected with the city by a gasoline trolley line, which carries passengers, mail, express and freight. The State Highway Commission is at present constructing a hard surfaced road from the city to the Fort. The reservation contains over 120,000 acres of land and has the greatest artillery firing ranges in the world. During the summer months the Fort is also used as a training center for the National Guards, the Reserve Officers and the Civilian Military Training Camps.

Fayetteville is located in the very heart of the most productive agricultural section of the State of North Carolina. In 1923 the gross income from the three most important crops was over $5,000,000. The six major crops grown in the vicinity of Fayetteville ranked by acreage are as follows: Cotton, corn, hay, tobacco, sweet potatoes and vegetables. The shipping of cantaloupes, watermelons, string beans and other green vegetables is a large and growing industry.

Fayetteville, with its excellent water supply, its well kept streets, its public health department, its sanitary inspector, its freedom from epidemics and its location may well be termed a "healthy" city. Its climate is temperate and extreme cold weather is seldom experienced. The mean annual temperature is 61.6 F. and the mean annual precipitation is 52.63 inches. The rainfall is so distributed as to be fairly uniform throughout the year and crops seldom suffer from severe drought and total failures are so infrequent as to be negligible.

Churches of all denominations, a splendid system of graded and high schools, theatres, moving picture houses and other recreational features make this an ideal home town.

There are a great number of diversified industries located in Fayetteville, such as cotton mills, silk mill, box factories, saw mills, veneer plants, brick plants and many others. With a surplus of power to be had at reasonable costs, a local market handling cotton, available sites for new construction and with adequate and excellent shipping facilities, Fayetteville offers to the prospective mill man an ideal combination of facts that will work out to the very best advantage.

There are innumerable opportunities offered in the district immediately surrounding Fayetteville for the production of foodstuffs and especially in the hog raising industry and other forms of agriculture. Also owing to the means of outlet offered by the railroads and public roads the products are easily marketed. Desirable lands can be had at reasonable prices and the land and home-seeker looking for that combination which makes for health, happiness and prosperity will find here opportunity in abundance and a cordial and sincere welcome.

A new hotel is now under course of construction and when completed will take care of the hotel needs of the city. Several new buildings are being erected for business purposes and a great number of new homes are now under course of construction.

Fayetteville has a fine country club with an excellent golf course, a new Y. M. C. A. building, live and wide-awake civic and fraternal associations and a fine spirit of co-operation among its citizens, making it an ideal city for new enterprises and citizens. The Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce will be glad to furnish any information desired regarding the city and surrounding territory and will at all times endeavor to acquaint inquirers with facts regarding this section of the State.

THE FAYETTEVILLE OBSERVER

was founded in 1817, and, for the most of that time, has been in possession of the late Edward J. Hale or his son, E. J. Hale, once president of The Observer Corporation and chief owner and for six years past U. S. Minister to Porto Rica. For the two decades ending with 1865, it was the most influential and most widely circulated journal in North Carolina, and was one of the leading papers of the South, having a large circulation in all the States between North Carolina and the Mexican border. As a result of the destruction of its office buildings and property by General Sherman, in 1865, and of the decadence of the town in which it was printed, its publication was suspended for a period thereafter. Upon its resumption, its circulation naturally fell far short of that before and during the war. But this is now increasing rapidly with the new life recently taken on by the city of Fayetteville and by the adjacent country. The former has become an important silk and cotton mill center and wholesale distributing point, as well as a shopping place for a half dozen counties. The latter has added large truck industries to the already important cotton-growing industry. The Fayetteville Observer enters daily every home in the city of Fayetteville, Cumberland County, and is the home paper of the suburban towns. The Fayetteville Observer is the only daily paper published in a radius of seventy-four miles.

With such a history back of it, the Observer naturally circulates among the very best people in this section, the highly prosperous Upper Cape Fear country of North Carolina; and probably to a greater extent than in the case of any other paper, its readers scan every word in it, advertisements as well as reading matter. A glance at the advertisements carried will show how completely it represents the people it serves.

Fayetteville is 6 hours from Richmond, 9 hours from Washington, and 15 hours from New York.
